

The Mexican Wolf Reward Has Gone up to $60,000! Help Distribute Reward Posters to Stop Criminals Killing Lobos

In June, federal officials issued a report on the decline of the wild Mexican wolf population to a dangerous low of only 42 at the end of 2009. According to the report, illegal wolf killings are the leading cause of death for Mexican gray wolves. Between 1998 and June 2009, 31 Mexican gray wolves were killed illegally. Another 47 mysteriously disappeared.

Tragically, three more highly endangered Mexican gray wolves, two of whom were the alpha males of their packs, were found dead in the wild this summer.

The alpha male of the Hawk's Nest Pack was shot to death in eastern Arizona, leaving his mate to raise helpless pups without him. The alpha male of the San Mateo Pack was found dead under suspicious circumstances in New Mexico. Both deaths are under investigation. A younger male wolf from the Hawk's Nest Pack was also confirmed to have been shot.

These killings have to stop.

Please print out copies of the reward poster, preferably on eye-catching, day-glo colored paper, and post them everywhere, often. You can download them here:
